Recfishwest runs almost 50 clinics annually throughout the state that are designed to be fun while teaching participants responsible and sustainable fishing practices and the importance of SunSmart behaviour.

Recreational fishing contributes significantly to the health and wellbeing of the community through exercise, family involvement, enjoyment of the environment and consumption of fresh fish, an important food source.

The proposed clinics will pass on messages of general aquatic conservation and recognition of fish species, catch and release, casting techniques and selection of bait and general rigging.

The clinics are an initiative of Recfishwest and supported by Healthway and the Cancer Council WA.
